

DANA TOOK SICK WIFE FROM R.I. ASYLUM

"Perfect Bride," Suicide at Nantucket, Removed from a Providence Hospital for the Insane Against the Advice of Physicians
In an Unpainted Box of White Pine, With a Pillow of Excelsior, Body Is Buried in Potter's Field
Cost of the Funeral Was $100

That Jennie Holliday, daughter of "perfect lady" at Edmund T. P. bridge, grandson of the P. Longfellow, who threw herself in the bay at Nantucket, had been patient at the Walter hospital for lunacy at Providence is the startling fact which has come to light at the inquest.

Three weeks before going to the National Hospital, Mrs. Dana was in the Federal hospital. Her young husband came there and, against the advice of physicians took her away.

He told that the trip to Scotland would do her more good than confinement in an institution (hospital). He believed that in reaction from stress she would recover her mental and physical strength.

The sympathy of the people of Manhattan went out to the young wife who suffered from the same fate as linked on the island with the same her tragic death, and the people there are still discussing the strangest tragedy the island has known.

MISS RUTH GASTON, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. William A. Gaston, became the bride yesterday afternoon in the Trinity Church of John Kenneth Howard of San Mateo, Calif. and Boston, at one of the most brilliant and fashionable receptions in the season.

The bride is a first debutante and is a Vincent Club girl. Mr. Howard graduated at Harvard this year and will spend two years more

A view of the chapel celebration was a wedding lower with windows on all sides overlooking the Carlos Rivera house and costing many thousands of dollars, specially built at the cost of the Queen residence at No. 27 Bay State road for the wedding reception which followed the church ceremony.

A profusion of costly flowers and palms flanking the altar at the church added to the scene of magnificence presented by the wedding guests were by the bride and her 100+ attendants.

Mrs. Annie Levy, restaurant keeper at No. 736 Ocean avenue, Beverly, was arrested last night charged with assault on an officer and her son, John, was held charged with an illegal liquor sale and also with assault on

A car bound from New Bedford Monument Beach, passing through Mattapoisett, was struck by lightning that came down the trolley pole, burnt out all the fuses and set the car on fire. The passengers were forced to hustle out into the rain to escape the flames.

The Most Remarkable Victory Ever Won by a Submarine---The Sinking of the British Battleship Majestic in the Dardanelles

GERMANS CHECK BIG FRENCH DRIVE NORTH OF ARRAS

Allies Forced to Withdraw from Part of Captured Trenches, Says Berlin Report.

By International News Service. LONDON, June 26.—A sanguinary infantry engagement in which huge numbers of troops are employed on both sides is being waged between the Somme, sugar factory and the Beine-Arras highway, north of Arras.

The great battle was initiated by the Germans, who have been strongly reinforced at this point, with the object of destroying the allies' plans for offensive operations against Lens, key to the German position. Already, according to the German report, the French have been forced to withdraw from trenches they had taken between Souchez and Neuville, repeated attacks by the French, who appeared to greatly increased force, being broken up under the German fire. In this sector, where for weeks hostile aviators have been struggling for the upper hand in a war in the air, the Germans claim at last to have won the mastery.

Strong "demonstrations" are being made by the Germans against isolated sections of the French battle line with the object of keeping the French so occupied with local engagements that they cannot withdraw troops of the first line from any section of the immediate front to throw into the effort being made to sever the German line at Arras.

SHRELLING THE LABYRINTH. Meantime, the German heavy batteries located at Ginchy, Augre and Vimy for two days have been pouring a steady stream of metal and high explosives into the newly acquired French trenches in the Labyrinth and about Souchez.

Here, the most strategic task the French have yet attempted, confronts them. Before any serious impression can be made on the German line, the important railway center. Before this town is in their hands they must not only drive the Germans from Augre and Ginchy, two strongly fortified positions, but they will be forced to carry by assault the almost perpendicular heights of Vimy. Then and only then will they be able to strike at the backbone of the German resistance, which is Arras.

In the fighting north of Arras, the French claim to have maintained all

England Starts 12-Day Campaign of Recruiting

By International News Service. LONDON, June 26.—Tomorrow is "Recruiting day." Twelve hundred meetings will be held on the Sabbath to increase the volunteers for Lord Kitchener's army.

These meetings, which will be addressed by British soldiers who have won the Victoria Cross, political leaders and prominent suffragettes, will constitute only the opening gun in the recruiting campaign, however.

The work will be kept up for twelve days and in that time it is hoped that half a million new volunteers will enroll themselves. While many leaders still advocate a policy of conscription, the advocates of this recruiting campaign believe their efforts will drive that conscription is unnecessary.

Their gains. Arras itself is becoming the storm center of the artillery campaign, the northern suburbs of the town being the object of a severe bombardment today.

WITHERING GERMAN FIRE.

Paris admits a slight German gain in the fighting on the heights of Meuse, east of the Calonne trenches. Here, on both sides of the de Trianche road, the French attacked strongly during yesterday, but according to Berlin, met such a withering fire from the German guns that they were forced to desist after suffering heavy losses.

The Germans, east of de Trianche, penetrated the French line at a section of the trenches the French had previously captured and made good their foothold, the French still holding, however, the adjoining sections. Mine and hand grenade warfare still being waged with great energy by both sides on every section of the front to the accompaniment of violent artillery duels, which, however, cause no perceptible change in the relative positions of the combatants.

The text of the afternoon French communiqué follows:

"The night was comparatively quiet on the entire front. In the region to the north of Arras there is nothing to report except that between the sugar factory and the national highway from Beine to Arras, there were some infantry movements, accompanied by a slight cannonade.

"Our advance is hampered by the condition of the ground, which has been rendered almost impassable at some points by the recent storms. On the Champagne and Artois front, mine warfare continues to our advantage.

Tonight's official communiqué from Paris to the region north of Arras the infantry actions reported in the previous communiqué lasted until night. Our gains were wholly maintained. The day was marked by an intermittent bombardment which was particularly violent against the northern suburbs of Arras.

"In the heights of Meuse, east of the Calonne trenches, the Germans delivered an attack which was repulsed everywhere except at one point where they took a few prisoners of trenches held by two detachments of the front line.

"On the remainder of the front fighting but artillery action is reported.

GERMANS CLAIM NEW GAINS BOTH EAST AND WEST

Say Last of French Are Driven Out at Souchez; Battle of Air on Arras.

By International News Service. BERLIN, June 26.—(By Wireless)—The German general staff today officially announced important new victories over the English in the eastern theatre of war, including the capture of several positions with 550 prisoners and machine guns.

Considerable gains over the French in the west also were announced. The French were driven out of the remaining portion of the German positions north of Souchez.

The Germans blew up a portion of the enemy's position near Souchez on the heights of the Meuse. Trenches and a road held by the enemy were attacked and three kilometers of their front broken up. The Germans attacked and captured a French position to the east of de Trianche.

GENERAL STAFF'S REPORT.

The report of the general staff follows:

"Western theatre: Close range fighting, which proceeded uninterrupted for some days around a portion of our positions which remained in the hands of the enemy north of Souchez, half-way between Souchez and Neuville, came to an end during the night. The last of the French forces were driven out of our trenches. Yesterday evening, the enemy received strong reinforcements at this point, also on both sides of Lorette Heights, but as they advanced to attack, they were beaten off.

"In Champagne, near Souchez, we blew up a portion of the enemy's position. East of Perthes the French strongly destroyed by a mine mine. On the heights of the Meuse, war of entrenchment is going on. The enemy brought up troops four deep over a front of about three kilometers, ready for an attack. They everywhere broke up under our fire. With their enemy pressed forward into our trenches he was beaten off. Our heavy losses and was driven back. Yesterday we captured the enemy's advanced position east of de Trianche. East of this place the enemy is still holding the small part of a trench captured last Sunday.

Attacks made by the enemy advanced patrol near Lantry failed.

BATTLE OF THE AIR.

The commencement of the great struggle near Arras our air force has been struggling with those of the enemy for the mastery. The struggle caused losses on both sides but ours were heavier. On some days past we apparently got the upper hand.

"Eastern theatre: A Wurtemberg regiment of the German front line north of Oudart, north of Bransbourg on both sides of the Meuse. It took the positions taken against several counterattacks. The heavy captured amounted to 434 prisoners, four machine guns and a few other trophies.

"Southeastern theatre: This army under General Von Linsingen uses its attacks on the northern bank of the Dnieper and the right bank of the Dnieper. The army of the Dnieper, still held by the enemy, has been repulsed. Our troops have taken 150 prisoners.

Dutch Steamer Hit by Mine or Torpedo

COPENHAGEN, June 26.—The Dutch steamer Ceres was sunk by a mine or torpedo in the Gulf of Bohus on Friday. Twenty-five men and her crew were rescued.

The captain of the Ceres, who was held at a Swedish port today, stated that his destroyer saw a torpedo boat before the Ceres was sunk. He was unable to make out the nationality of the torpedo boat.

The Ceres was a vessel of 1,500 tons. She was built in 1905.

THE most remarkable feat ever performed by a submarine was that of the German boat U-51. This little craft made the ocean trip from Germany, down the English Channel and the Atlantic to Gibraltar, and along the Mediterranean to the Dardanelles.

The allied fleet was sighted. While pursued by a destroyer the submarine torpedoed the British ship Triumph.

The submarine then sank to the bottom, where it remained for two days, then came up near the Majestic. Ten ships were circling around her. Finally an opening was found and a torpedo launched. It went home, and the Majestic sank just as the picture printed here was taken.

The submarine then proceeded to Constantinople, where it arrived after a trip of 5,000 miles, occupying forty-two days.

Soon after this double loss of the Triumph and the Majestic, the allied fleet withdrew to a harbor in the island of Imbros.

IMPORTERS ARE PROMISED RELIEF FROM THE EMBARGO

WASHINGTON, June 26.—A committee of New York importers, representing the American Importers Association, received assurances from Secretary of State Lansing today that immediate relief may be expected from the inconvenience to which they are subjected by the embargo.

The committee announced that they called on the State Department to see that the President and Secretary of State were to them their constituents, and that they were to be relieved from the inconvenience to which they are subjected by the embargo.

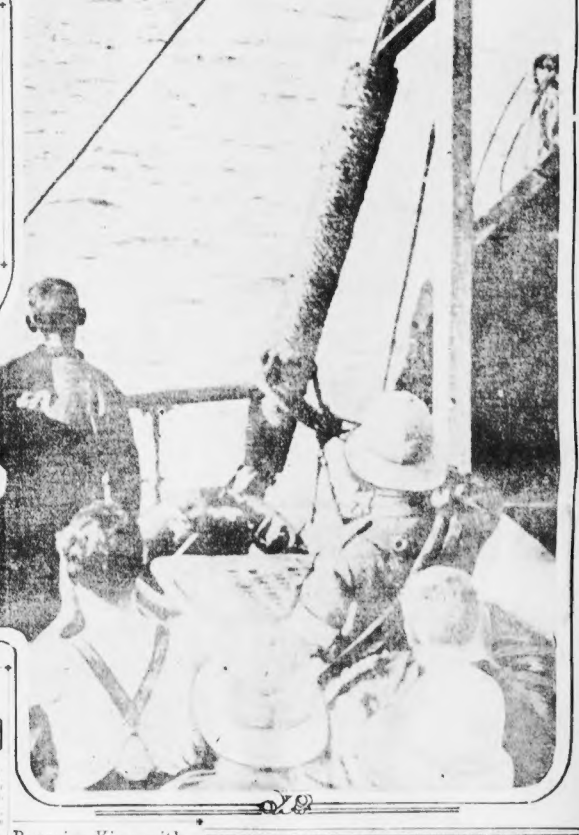

The committee expressed a determination on the part of the President and Secretary of State to see that the embargo was not applied to anything but the necessities of life, and that the embargo was not applied to anything but the necessities of life.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE INTERVIEWS JOSEPH LEE, "FATHER OF BOSTON'S PARK SYSTEM"

Joseph Lee, the "father" of Boston's great park system, and scenes in Franklin Park, where walking on the grass is NOT prohibited and where children and grownups depart from dawn to dusk.

Boys burrowing in the leaves at Franklin Park, ball playing at the park, watching the elephants at play, horse racing at Franklin Field, golfing at Franklin Park, are the scenes depicted.

Boston's Marvelous Parks and Playgrounds, Like an Emerald Necklace of Verdure and Beauty, Has Gradually Hung Itself About the City's Shoulders, While Isolated Gems Here and There Rest Upon Her Breast, Until It Would Seem One May Pretty Nearly Circumambulate the Entire City Without Once Stepping From a Gravelled Pathway or a Grassy Lawn, Says Distinguished Author.

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

TO do good by stealth, and blush to find it fame" may have been a trait of persons who lived in Queen Anne's time, but it has fallen out of fashion in our own epoch. When a great man founds—with the help of the beneficiaries—a string of public libraries, he does not refuse to allow the enthusiastic architect to carve his (not the architect's) name over the door. When another great man endows a university, means exist to find out who he is. When another fills the spare rooms of a Metropolitan Museum with his spare collections, something leads us to suspect the identity of the donor. When a play is put on the boards with the title, "It Pays to Advertise," it enjoys a long run, and everybody says, "How true!" However, however, is a queer place. Anachronisms and other things incongruous with the age occur here.

Gentlemen of wealth and culture sometimes accept official positions, carrying salaries which they very chide and securities might consider inadequate, and work hard for years for an unfamiliar object termed the public benefit. Private properties sometimes become the property of the municipality without any One-Dollar-to-Sea-land-Paid-and-Other-Valueable-Considerations—unless there be value in giving to those who are in need. Money is sometimes invested in Boston which carries no interest except for those by whom the money was not made. Mere tyros in the philosophy of economy would criticize such go-

Have Boston Legislatures risen up as one man at the call of Altruism?

The matter is perplexing; but after a good deal of random inquiry, uniformly resulting in mention of the name of Joseph Lee, I decided that the best thing I could do would be to call on Mr. Lee and ask him a few plain questions. He had an office room somewhere in the city. I was told, and was a man of independent means, a graduate of Harvard, and a Bostonian of the Bostonians; and if he were not at the bottom of the whole thing, nobody could say who else was.

I incline to the opinion that I am among the most incompetent of interviewers, and it was consulting to discover—as I soon did—that Mr. Joseph Lee is, of all men whom I have attempted, one of the least accomplished in the art of being interviewed.

Companions in misfortune, we became sensible of a certain sympathetic vibration; at all events, I immediately found myself in the best of good company, and am convinced that I did most of the talking, though what I may have said had little useful connection with the theme which was the pretext for my presence.

Not that Mr. Lee was reticent, in the general sense; it was only on the subject of his own personal acts and importance that he seemed to be at a loss for anything to offer.

Is a man, I should say, between fifty and sixty years old, with a solid aquiline nose, a short-cut grey moustache, and grey, animated eyes with a very agreeable and friendly expression in them.

Eminence in Inverse Ratio to Formality.

I have met many eminent men on my adventures, and have observed that their eminence was in inverse ratio to their formality; so that when I found this descendant of the Boston aristocracy to be as the pharisee, as plain as an old shoe, I could only infer, that there must be something out of the ordinary, at least, in him.

"Take this chair," he said, "so we can look at each other;" and we looked at each other, and I began to tell him of my enjoyment of Franklin Park, and of the masterly manner in which the natural ground had been taken advantage of, so that all its best points were brought out with no obtrusiveness at all.

People were allowed to go on the grass, actually; and policemen with clubs chasing little children and hailing their mothers to hell for letting them be children, which my New York experience had led me to suppose must be the regular situation in all public parks, was, in Franklin Park, amazingly not so.

Mr. Lee assented to my observations, but nothing in his manner or words indicated that he was responsible for establishing these extraordinary conditions.

On the other hand, he cheerfully told how one park reservation ran into another, and diversified here and there, or jumped clean into the midst of city areas where they would do most good.

"You know that path along the banks of the Charles, from Charles Street toward Cambridge and along to Watertown and Waltham? Well, that connected path and retaining wall were built and given to the city by Storror and then Blue Hill, you know?"

"But how was the land for all this obtained?" I inquired. "Millions are paid for such attractive building land anywhere?"

Mr. Lee laughed a little. "There is a sort of jealousy between adjoining townships, perhaps, each fearing the other might get ahead of it somehow, and land lying between them would get into our possession in that way."

So, the Children of Light could exercise a little diplomacy at need. On the same "I'll show 'em" principle, a gentleman buys an automobile to show the people of his neighborhood, and the automobile agent repeats the benefit. I also noted a little slip in the use of that word "our," which may be charged to me, "others and myself," and felt a Sherlock Holmes pride in my sagacity. But I refrained from asking Mr. Lee whether he had been converted by the associations, lest he should deny it.

He might happen to say "no," but "father people" was all he meant.

Special Interest in Exercise Grounds.

He intimated a special interest in the exercise grounds, such as Franklin Field, where the children and young folks could have healthy diversion outdoors. "The children" were often on his lips.

Those who know Mr. Lee refer to him as a selfless worker; that is, he likes to do things that will make for the welfare and happiness of people who have special power to do anything in that line for themselves. Several pieces of land within the city, or easily accessible, had been secured, and were given in trust to the city, and given instruction in how to use them.

After they had been bought this way, and made at home, as it were, they would acquire the habit.

"But not all the land has been properly improved," he remarked. "A great deal more is to be done." And he took out of his pocket a little map of the city, and showed me the marked in red in various parts of the harbor.

Had Mr. Lee done, or is he doing, all that is to be done in the way of parks and recreation grounds, and thousands of people are getting life and health and wholesome exercise in them?

It would stretch out and undulate in the sun and shadow of trees invite you; there are wonderful flowering shrubs when the developments have been accomplished.

There he sits in that narrow little office room of his, with windows looking out upon the uninteresting backs of other buildings. His building is shabby, and in his office are no panels of steel made to look like mahogany, there is no plate glass over the surface of his desk—"I picked this up somewhere," he said, and seemed to like the shabby old thing. Papers, pamphlets and books lie about, or stand on old bookshelves.

No gentlemanly clerk bustle to take his orders, or to keep visitors waiting in ante-room, there is no ante-room. It is an office, but it is not a place where money is made.

A man might hide himself in such a place for fifty years, and nobody suspect his existence. Nor would any manifestation of Mr. Lee's fondness for the thing anybody did suspect it. I advised him to get out of the office, and he did not attempt to disguise his interest in things which promote public good, and the good of the poorer part of the public especially, but he did not look to him as a professional, or see anything important in his existence.

He can tell them about Storror and Blue Hill and many another, and he does not attempt to disguise his interest in things which promote public good, and the good of the poorer part of the public especially, but he did not look to him as a professional, or see anything important in his existence.

Thoughts Centre on Things to Be Done.

What is to be done? Is from the natural impulse of his disposition and his thought centre upon the things to be done, and not upon the done. And yet, if you were to follow the threads back from the benefits to their source, I will venture to say that Mr. Lee would presently find himself leaving the elevator to a certain floor, and going down to the end of the passage.

Here sits Mr. Lee, very busy about something, in the middle of Boston, and all round Boston are many lovely parks and recreation grounds, and thousands of people are getting life and health and wholesome exercise in them.

It would stretch out and undulate in the sun and shadow of trees invite you; there are wonderful flowering shrubs along the paths; you will come upon sheets of water with ducks quacking about in them, and gray stone bridges spanning them; there are tracts of wild woodland and cliffs of red rock, with wild flowers in their crevices, the noises of the city are unheard here, but the thrushes and blackbirds sing, and the sky stretches wide and free overhead.

All these things seem very remote indeed from the unassuming little back office at the end of the passage, with the name of Joseph Lee on the door. Perhaps not one in ten thousand of the citizens and beneficiaries of the parks have ever heard that name, or know what it stands for.

And if it ever is known, it will be gradually, that will decrease it. I have not done Mr. Lee opportunities to advertise himself, but that sort of opportunity knocks at his door in vain, it comes rarely enough to number of another sort, but not to that.

Some of the donors of the parks for which settlement work is done, would perhaps find it repelling to them about spontaneous charity.

But let me not do Mr. Lee a service to him as an example as to how to live as an example of altruism. Altruism, indeed, makes one think of a theory, and Mr. Lee showed me no symptoms of being a theorist, his simple ideas of things for his own satisfaction, and has no name to give it. He knows something of the troubles of poor people, and of the sources of crime, and he knows how to get the best of nature, and of active recreation. However, vice and idleness are not bred among flowers and trees and green lawns.

If the children of the poor cannot be delivered from their foul and dark rooms and their filthy gutters, let them at least be introduced at intervals to the sweet green and freedom of nature, so that they may carry back the remembrance of that lovely and airy end to their sorry environment.

Mr. Lee sits in his office, and does not make money there; but the parks of Boston grow and prosper, and the people resort to them more and more. He degrees, and gets life and health, and takes his place in the annals of their minds.

It was Mr. Lee, at last put it there, but nature—no power within him without it, I suppose, might be induced to admit that he had had something to do with causing these parks, and nature, to get together. And that is nothing! No only this would be a better world if more people who have nothing to do, would improve the chance to do, once in a while, that sort of "nothing."

As a man does, so he is; and what he does, that is he. Mr. Lee, and the men and women of Boston who are like-minded with him, do doubt exist in the flesh, and are visible and palpable to sense; but that is only their outside. If you would penetrate to the real inner-world of them, you must listen to the silent testimony of what they have done for others, without desire for fame or expectation of reward.

Go, to begin with, to the parks of Boston, where are copious doses of nature's elixir of life, and reflect that although these unselfish benefactors who prescribed the elixir, and administered it.

The question, who made Franklin Park, who started the park idea, who maintained and developed them may lack a categorical answer, but there is in Mr. Lee's aspect and bearing a certain cheerfulness which does not seem likely to be inspired by the furniture of his office, or by the view out of its window.

Mr. Lee ever encountered him in my walks in the park themselves. I have only met three other people like myself, having good time, strolling about the paths and over the lawns, playing lawn tennis and golf, observing the elephants, peacocks, ducks and deer, and squinting on the turf under the shade of the trees and calling their comfortable little outdoor life.

These holiday-makers have not, probably, any personal acquaintance with Mr. Lee, but it is not for Mr. Lee, and persons of his sort, they would not be making acquaintance with the lawlessness and wholesomeness of green trees and grass, flowers, country air and peace—nothing of these inestimable privileges would be known to Boston city dwellers, either.

They may thank God for these privileges, perhaps, but with the stewards of God's mercies, they have no common concern. Meanwhile Mr. Lee sits in his office, very busy about something and looking happy. Regularly, who can, I leave my effort to taken up by able investigator.

HEIR'S SHARE IN ALMOY CASE IN COURT TUESDAY

BOTH ARE ACTIVE IN SOCIETY

Fluence A. Barnum of Lowell, who recently obtained a divorce from James O. Barnum of Winchester, grandchild of the late James S. Barnum, one of the founders of the great house of Chase & Barnum, and one of the heirs to the great fortune left by him, will start an action Tuesday against her former husband to secure alimony sufficient "to enable her to live in the style to which she has been accustomed."

The divorce trial attracted wide attention on account of the social prominence of both young Barnum and his beautiful young wife. In April, 1912, Barnum, then but twenty-two years of age, and Miss Fluence A. Meyer of Lowell, daughter of John C. Meyer, owner of one of the largest threadmaking mills in the country, were married, the wedding being a social event of that season.

ZIONISTS TODAY FOR OPEN GREAT SESSION

Delegates From All Over the Country and from Abroad Meet in Ford Hall.

The first group of Zionists Convention to be held in this country, and the third of its kind in the world, will have its formal opening today at 10 o'clock this morning in Ford hall on Ashburton place. Up to midnight 74 delegates had arrived for the opening.

Unusually grave problems face the conventions which will be in session until Thursday night. The original Zionist problem, of colonizing Jews in Palestine, has been heavy enough, but to this has suddenly been added the added problem arising from the European War and its unknown results.

Zionists from all over the country and from abroad are here for the formal opening. The high and distinguished delegates, the Boston lawyer, publicist and sociologist, will be in the first door of the convention, which had been specially arranged for the occasion, and extending to the full depth of the hall, the delegates will be seated in the hall, which is a beautiful and striking picture as she passed down the aisle, her long white gown, and her hair, which was styled in a high and elaborate manner.

Alvah Meyer Wins the Dash in Keen Competition at the Stadium.

The Eastern tryouts for the Panama-Pacific Exposition, which were held yesterday afternoon at the Harvard Stadium, brought out some excellent competition and some wonderful running.

Norman S. Taber, Hannes Kolehmainen, Bill Meunier, and Ted Meredith did the feature work on the path, while Bill Oler of Yale, Pat Ryan of New York, Harry Worthington of the B. A. A. were the stars of the field events.

In the one mile run Taber came within 4-5 of a second of equalling the world's record, which is now held by John Paul Jones. Kolehmainen set up a new A. A. A. record for five miles, and his rival in this race was Ted Meredith, who was defeated by those who had won his wonderful performance.

MEUNIER DISMAYED BY MARK.
Bill Meunier was deprived of a mile record in the 440 yard hurdle race because of a technicality. Meunier was clocked at 14 1/2, which is about two seconds faster than the mark set by G. R. Landerson of England in 1910.

Although Ted Meredith did not succeed in breaking any record he gave a grand exhibition of running a quarter.

Pat Ryan of the Irish of New York won two races, the 10 pound weight and the 10 foot weight. In the 55 pound weight throw, Harry Worthington of the B. A. A. won, and Ryan broke the old record of 58 feet 3 1/2 inches by 3 1/2 inches.

Bill Oler captured first place in the high jump by clearing the bar at 5 feet 3 inches, while Harry Worthington won the broad jump with a jump of 23 feet 4 1/2 inches.

Another A. A. A. record went to the boards when Harry Worthington won the 10 foot weight, which had been held by John C. Lawler of the B. A. A. for three years.

Norman Taber, the former Brown star, came within 4-5 of a second of John Paul Jones' world record for him at the thirty-yard mark and the Colby star looked like a sure winner up to the eighty-yard mark when Meyer put on an extra burst of speed and just nosed Howe out. Treadway captured third from Meyer.

Higgins, runner of Holy Cross, was only five feet ahead in the 500-yard run, and the result was a disappointment when it was learned that Ted Meredith, the University of Pennsylvania star, was the winner.

At the upper turn, Higgins and the lead. The time for the race was 1:22.50. Higgins and Fraser were the sprinters soon after Higgins began setting the pace and came from last to first place within the race.

Higgins and Fraser of the University of New York stayed with Howe, and just as they turned into the home stretch, Higgins and Fraser passed the former champion.

Used Cars and Accessories

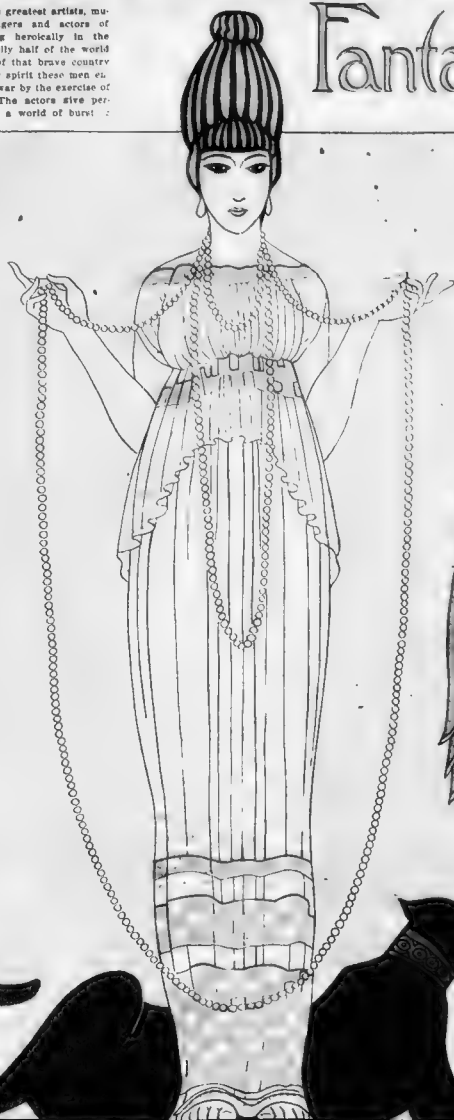

HERE are many of the greatest artists, musicians, writers, singers and actors of France now fighting heroically in the trenches. Indeed, fully half of the world of arts and letters of that brave country is at the front. With true Gallic spirit these men endeavor to lighten the horrors of war by the exercise of their own peculiar geniuses. The actors give performances not at all related to a world of bullets and gunpowder. Musicians and singers give their concerts and sing their lightest songs. Litterateurs write poems that are far removed from war.

On this page are a few charming drawings by Georges Barbier, one of the most distinguished French decorative artists, who is now in the trenches "somewhere in France." Barbier draws them for the amusement of his fellow-soldiers in an effort to keep his mind and their minds away from the horrors with which they are surrounded. Passed on for the amusement of the soldiers, these copies have just reached this country.

It is a curious note of psychology that the artists, the poets and the writers who are actually fighting do not, in their purely creative work—which they find means to pursue from time to time—deal with any of the terrible scenes in which they now move. Their minds seem to turn for relief to the peace and pleasures of the days before the war. On the other hand, the most striking war pictures, war stories and war poems are being produced by men who never have been at the front.

Why We Should WEAR WHITE CLOTHING ALL THE TIME

By J. H. Kellogg, M.D., D.D.

Nature has provided us with a most perfect system of self-preservation. The human body is a masterpiece of design, and its clothing is a part of that design. The most perfect clothing is that which is made of the finest materials, and which is worn in the most proper manner. The most perfect clothing is that which is made of the finest materials, and which is worn in the most proper manner. The most perfect clothing is that which is made of the finest materials, and which is worn in the most proper manner.

Science Explains How UNCOMFORTABLE, UNCLEANLY and UNHEALTHFUL DARK

CLOTHES Really Are Both Winter and Summer

How the Experiment Was Conducted.

Strips of Cloth Were Laid Across a Solid Block of Ice. The Strips Were of Exactly the Same Size, Weight and Texture, but of Different Colors—White (A), Yellow (B), Red (C) and Black (D). The Ice in the Strips of Cloth in Place Was Then Exposed to the Heat of the Sun for a Considerable Period.

How the Experiment Resulted.

After Exposure to the Sun the Strips were Removed and the Amount of Melting Which Had Taken Place Under Each Was Carefully Measured. The Ice Where the White Strip (A) Had Been Was Practically Intact. That Where the Yellow Strip (B) Had Been Was Only Slightly Melted. But the Ice Under the Red Strip (C) Was Melted for a Depth of One Half Inch and That Under the Black Strip (D) for a Depth of Almost an Inch. This Experiment Proves Conclusively That Dark Cloth Draws the Sun's Rays and Is Therefore Most Unsuitable for Wear in Hot Weather.

RAY'S YOU CAN'T SEE to Blame for TIRED EYES

Some of the most common causes of tired eyes are the rays of light which are invisible to the human eye. These rays are called "ultra-violet" rays, and they are the most powerful of all the rays of light. They are the most powerful of all the rays of light. SCIENCE NOW KNOWS-

A Possible Way to Ward Off Lockjaw.

It has been found that a number of viruses are taken up by charcoal so rapidly that they lose their toxic properties for the tissues. Bacteria which are now everywhere are now everywhere are now everywhere.

How To Serve Potatoes.

POTATOES should always be served in an uncovered dish. If it is necessary for them to stand for a few minutes before being served, cover them with a cloth and a lid in order that the steam as it condenses may be absorbed by the cloth and not returned to the potatoes to make them soggy and hard to digest.

A New War Disease.

PHYSICIANS in Vienna recently have had their attention drawn to a peculiar new disease among soldiers, known as "neuroleptia," or "night blindness." To the night blind the capacity to distinguish objects is lost, and even on moonlight nights they are without the sense of sight. Sometimes men do not perceive that they are night blind until they stumble into holes or are similarly reminded of their falling. In some instances the disease became so virulent that it was regarded as an epidemic. Night blindness is now particularly common among soldiers who are subjected to the strength of body and mind is believed to be the principal cause.

1. The first step in the process of creating a new product is to identify a market need. This involves conducting market research to understand what consumers want and what problems they are facing.

2. Once a market need has been identified, the next step is to develop a concept for a product that addresses this need. This involves brainstorming ideas and creating a prototype.

3. The third step is to conduct a feasibility study to determine if the product is viable. This involves assessing the technical, financial, and market feasibility of the product.

4. If the feasibility study is positive, the next step is to develop a business plan. This involves outlining the business model, marketing strategy, and financial projections.

5. The final step is to launch the product and monitor its performance. This involves creating a marketing campaign, distributing the product, and tracking sales and customer feedback.

HUNTING WILD GAME FROM AEROPLANES

Glenn I. Martin and Fred Mills Returning from an Aeroplane-Hunting Expedition in the San Fernando Valley, California, with Three Coyotes and Two Bob-Cats That They Had Killed.

How Lions, Tigers, Elephants and Other Wild Beasts of the Jungle, the Forest and the Plains May Fall Victims to the New Sportsmen of the Air.

WHEN the air is filled with the roar of an engine, and the wings of a biplane are seen gliding over a vast, open landscape, the sportsmen of the air are at work. They are hunting wild game from the sky, a new and exciting sport that has captured the imagination of many.

"There is no reason at all why lions, tigers and elephants might not be hunted from the air, although, of course, it would be necessary first to drive them out of the jungles into the open before attempting to shoot."

While the sportsmen of the air are at work, the wild beasts of the jungle are also at work. They are hunting for food, and the sportsmen of the air are at work hunting for them. This is a new and exciting sport that has captured the imagination of many.

Is she going to be able to find a prince who will love her and all the loving little desires that have been fostered in her since birth?

Do you begin to spread his wings when she finds that she must want to scrub the floors, instead of having servants to wait upon her, hand and foot? Do you begin to wonder if she will be able to find a prince who will love her, sees her old girl friends pass by, ah, missing in the new fashions?

And we endure the constant sordid details of life on the smallest possible wage, why is picnicking all the departed days when dollars meant nothing for her?

And you wonder if she will be able to find a prince who will love her? Here two of the newest experimenters tell why they know that they have set in the path of true and lasting happiness, while cynical, but more or less learned, social science warns them that their dream is only a bubble, doomed to burst.

Exhibit B for Science

Julia Breitung-Kleist, Who Married Her Father's Gardener and Found No
Love in the Cottage, Confering with Attorneys After She Had Gone Back to Her Father and Riches.

ONE is the one emotion so strong and so much a part of human nature that it is the power to revolutionize completely for a time the nature, the viewpoint, and even the most fixed habits of those who are subject to its influence at all times.

Love is a primal force which has nothing whatever to do with specific things, codes or anything else. Love itself exists. Codes, laws, moral systems, intellectual training and all of these things are designed to guide and keep it within bounds. But the emotion itself has no more to do with them than a person has with to what use will be put some great secret of nature that it has discovered.

Love has arrayed against it an enormous number of habits—habits of luxury, habits of freedom, habits of laziness, and so on. Love has this faculty that it will cling with resistance to whatever it has once attracted. If Love has this weakness—that when the old habits begin to try to pull it away from the new magnet, time, which Kirchner calls the "time factor," pulls the old habits on the side of the habits against love. Its hold becomes weaker progressively. After a time the habits pull it away from its magnet, and, oddly enough, the same magnet that attracted it will never attract it again.

Herein lies the danger to the dreams of these romantic young ladies who think that they can bridge with love the chasm between their old life and this new life, between riches and poverty. For the moment nothing can aweave them from their new view. Love in its intensity has created a whole new world in which all the sorrows, work-day things are hidden and all the land or sea. But this new world that love has created is not the real world. It is a visualization of what ought to be instead—alas, of what is.

Everyone knows how difficult it is to "hold to" and direct a dream. The same difficulty exists in holding to and directing this dream world that love creates. All around it, like bad faeries, are the girl's and her haunts. The dream world hopes to meet a little day, but

The dream world begins to grow a little dim. It's the circle, now not so much haunted, will ever be a memory of the days when her entourage waited upon her hand and foot. She will think of this when she is washing dishes or scrubbing the floors of the cottage. She will put on her last year's now shabby garments and she will see the gay, laughing old friends who have not sacrificed for love pass her by in the most up-to-date of fashions. And the dream world becomes dimmer as she remembers her costly furs and jewels and dainty garments. One by one and ever more rapidly, the memories of her old life

And then suddenly there comes a curious moment, just like the awakening of a dream, when the illusion disappears absolutely—and there is left only the druggeries, the sordidness, the deprivations of the cottage in all their ugliness. In contrast her old life of ease and luxury seems far more desirable than it ever was when she lived in it.

What has happened to this. She still retains her capacity for love, but her traiping, the habits of her mind which were formed during her most impressionable years, have conquered as they inevitably always

How the Family Cat Gave Them Diphtheria

Examining a Cat's Throat for Symptoms of Contagious Diseases

The cat, it has been found, although suffering little from diphtheria itself, is what is termed a "perfect host" for the diphtheria germs. The microbes find lodgment in its rough tongue, in the corrugated roof of its mouth, or hard palate, and around its soft palate, just as in human beings, and there they thrive and multiply without doing harm to the cat.

The Family Cat May, for instance, lick the skin of a little diphtheria sufferer.

Coming out of the House It Will Be Picked Up by Another Child and by Its Characteristic Spitting, Pass the Germs on to Its Holder.

Again, It Licks Its Paw with Its Tongue Filled with Germs, and Then Licks Them Over Its Face.

The Case That Has Stirred Montclair, New Jersey, to Join in the Fight to Suppress the Petted Disseminator of Malignant Germs

A Photograph Showing How a Cat Opens Its Mouth and Disseminates Malignant Germs to Its Petter.

A BILL is now being drafted in New Jersey, which would require the owners of cats to have them examined for diphtheria germs. The bill is the result of a case in Montclair, New Jersey, where a child died of diphtheria after being kissed by a cat. The case has stirred the town to join in the fight to suppress the petted disseminator of malignant germs.

The case involved a child who died of diphtheria after being kissed by a cat. The town has now passed a bill requiring the owners of cats to have them examined for diphtheria germs.

The danger of the cat as a carrier of diphtheria germs has been carefully studied scientifically. The germs can lodge in the cat's mouth and throat, and can be transmitted to humans through contact with the cat's mouth or face.

Medical Science's Indictment of the Cat as an Agent of Disease and Death

By John B. Huber, A.M., M.D.

A CAT can give its petter a very bad case of diphtheria. That is the verdict of medical science. The cat is a perfect host for the diphtheria germs, and can transmit them to humans through contact with its mouth or face.

There is cat asthma. All too many little children have asthma; some of them are very young. It is a very bad disease, and can be caused by the cat. The cat's fur and dander can irritate the child's lungs, and cause them to cough and wheeze.

The New "Girlish" Dresses

By Lady
Duff-Gordon.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucky" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's new establishment brings her into close touch with the centre of fashion.

Another Girlish Dress Adaptable to Older Women. It is of White Chiffon and Lace Trimmed With Roses and Carrying a Suggestion of Grecian Modes.

young frills and flounces? All that the young girl has to remember is that she must dress girlishly. When she comes to know that mamma and grandmamma also ought to dress as girlishly as they can there are no disharmonies left.

In the left hand corner is a real girlish dress for girls. It is of white chiffon, with silver lace bodice, a wide tulle and three-colored silk girdle. The top of the bodice is the surprise effect, and is caught up in the front with a pearl ornament. The whole effect is virginal.

Over to the right, on the other hand, is a girlish dress which mamma could also wear with a great deal of ease. It is really a dancing dress. It has a suggestion of the Greek in it, and is of white chiffon and lace trimmed with roses.

And down at the bottom of the page is a girlish street dress which mamma or ever grandmamma could wear. It is so adaptable.

It almost goes without saying that navy blue serge suiting is responsible for a goodly number of the new, full skirted models, whether they be of the coat and skirt, or the all-in-one "cratdress" variety, a trimming of black military braid being almost as inevitable as it is, "cut out," and always, effective.

Sometimes the costumes will have a short and quite straightly cut coat with a centre fastening of braided buttonholes and braided-covered buttons which can be used right up to the edge of the military collar, or left undone for an inch or two at the top, to show an under lining of white moire. Then, just over the hips, the trim little garment ends its career in a series of braided scallops, the skirt following this decorative example at the hem, where, by the way, its measurements are exactly four and a half yards. This is a style which can, indeed, be depended on to suit almost any woman blessed with the slim figure which helps to give an appearance of youthfulness even when the woman's Calvary—middle-age—is already in sight!

And sometimes, too, the navy blue will be provided with the latest Parisian contrast of seductive grey, in collar facings and cuffs, and, possibly, too, in the shirt-bosom, the popularity of this particular and pretty scheme being foreshadowed, indeed, by the display of quite a number of new boots and shoes carried out in navy blue place kid and grey cloth or cord, some of the boots being made still more decorative by a device of black braiding at either side of the laced fronts.

A Girlish Dress for Girls. White Chiffon, With Silver Lace Bodice, Tulle and Three-Colored Silk Girdle.

By Lady Duff-Gordon (London).

WHEN grandmothers dressing like young girls and mothers being mistaken for daughters, it is really a question just how a young girl should dress really to be different from mamma or grandmamma.

Unquestionably the craze for dancing has helped greatly to bring the new girlish note into all the dresses. Every one dances, and the stiff, staid old halos for women past forty are not at all harmonious with the positions of the modern dances, so can one be graceful in them. Imagine one doing the fox trot in the stiff satins that the lady of over forty used to wear!

Personally I like the new girlish dresses—because age is in most cases only a matter of the hind, and the younger we feel the younger we look.

I know a beautiful old lady of seventy in France whose dresses are the most girlish imaginable, and yet they are not out of harmony with her, because her mind is still girlish. She knows just how to wear these, and one always feels an atmosphere of exultation about her. Of course, I am not advocating a wrinkled person to wear the short dresses of childhood—but what I do mean is that most women have a tendency to "dress to old," and this is not only not beautiful, but it is unfair to the woman herself, and puts her out of the running, as you Americans say, long before she ought to be.

Therefore, I advocate girlishness in dress, as long as it can be displayed.

And as for young girls—what advantage does it make if mamma or grandmamma's dress is

The Elephant Is a Poor Rat Fighter

This picture, of huge, starred and striped America shivering at the sight of Asiatic rats may come true.

Very big is the elephant and the rats are small.

But MERE SIZE does not help him, or soothe his fears when the rats appear.

The elephant lacks the fighting machinery that would keep rats away.

Observe, please, the small terror in the lower left hand corner. Rats do not worry him, although he is small, for he is prepared for such fighting. This huge country of ours should cease talking about its bigness, realize that size does not mean safety, take warning from China and be prepared against rats.

E are invited to attend a conference to be held in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, "for the purpose of considering the adoption of proposals for a LEAGUE OF PEACE and deciding upon steps to be taken with a view to obtaining the support of public opinion and of governments."

The Hon. William Howard Taft will preside at his conference. We are requested, if unable to attend, to send "a letter containing suggestions." We are unable to attend, and here is the letter of suggestions.

Let those who want the United States to remain at peace GIVE THE UNITED STATES POWER TO BE USED AS PROTECTION AGAINST WAR.

The rat does not attack the lion. But the lion's side of peace as regards rats is not due to its size, but to the fact that it has teeth, claws and neck.

The rat DON'T attack and frighten the huge elephant, bigger than the lion. For the elephant is big, slow, UNDEFENDED, and the rat can gnaw its feet while he is asleep.

The United States while it remains undefended will be at the mercy of any swarm of rats from Asia, or any fighting power from Europe.

We want peace, of course. Everybody does. The price of peace is a great way to MAKE THE OCEANS ON BOTH SIDES OF US SAFE, COAST DEFENSES, SUBMARINES, TORPEDO-COAT DESTROYERS AND FIGHTING AIR-SHIPS EXCEEDING IN NUMBER AND QUALITY THOSE OF ANY OTHER NATION. PLUS A HUGE GOVERNMENT-OWNED COMMERCIAL NAVY, MAKING US INDEPENDENT OF THE SHIPS OF THE WORLD.

If the gentlemen who gather in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, act wisely, they will begin their proceedings with a preamble to the effect that there is NO PEACE FOR THE UNPROTECTED AND UNPREPARED among savages. And the peoples of the world in the hideous war now raging prove that men still are savages, remorseless, with only horror and brutality as the guiding factors.

If peace gentlemen were planning to live among the savages of the Congo they wouldn't discuss high town platitudes. They would say:

"We must have guns, plenty of powder, good, sharp knives, quinine to fight malaria. We do not want to hurt a single daring savage in that enemy region. But we also do not want them to hurt US. And we can keep them from attacking or thinking of attacking us, ONLY BY MAKING THEM REALIZE THAT ATTACK WOULD BE FOOLISH AND FATAL TO THEM."

It is with this country. We can be sure of only when we are absolutely prepared for at least while human nature remains as it is, which reveals of man's brutality as are and this European war continues to come to the end.

who gathered in the same Philadelphia to sign the Declaration of Independence represent NOT UNARMED, DEFENCELESS
HEATHEN BEINGS, BUT A NATION OF FARM-

ERS, EVERY ONE WITH HIS RIFLE, AND KNOWING HOW TO USE IT.

Our forefathers of 1776 were able to talk about independence without being ridiculous BECAUSE THEY HAD GUNS, AND COULD SHOOT.

They had ships, knew how to build them, how to operate them, how to sink the ships of enemies. This nation of to-day will be able to talk about peace without seeming ridiculous when it can truly say that it is armed AGAINST WAR.

We call our readers' attention to a book, "Defenseless America," by Hudson Maxim, a book published by the Hearst International Library Company, No. 119 West Fortieth street, New York City.

America is exactly what Hudson Maxim, a great expert, says it is—DEFENSELESS.

Look at this picture taken from Hudson Maxim's book:

How New York Could Be Taken.

In this picture Hudson Maxim shows that modern ships of enemy, equipped with the modern high powered guns, to say nothing of the indefinitely greater guns that are now being constructed, could stand comfortably away from New York's coast defenses and destroy the city.

It is said that our Government is PREPARING TO REMOUNT ITS COAST DEFENSE GUNS SO AS TO GIVE THEM AN INFINITELY GREATER RANGE.

But PREPARING to do this thing is not much comfort.

Fixed forts, as the war in Europe has proved are almost valueless.

The great forts between France and Germany were supposed to make invasion impossible. But it was necessary to send out men on foot and on horseback and dig trenches to DEFEND THOSE "IMPREGNABLE" FORTS.

Our forts along the shore STAY IN ONE PLACE.

Great ships with powerful guns, move back and forth, once getting the range, can put hundreds of thousands of shells into one fort, and make of it nothing but a forgotten thing, a hole in the ground.

The only way to meet these FLOATING FORTS that may come to attack us on the Atlantic, and especially on the Pacific, IS TO HAVE PLENTY OF BIG AND MORE POWERFUL FLOATING FORTS TO SEND OUT TO MEET THEM.

We want our coast defense, of course, but they are the second and the inferior defense.

The big floating fort that can be moved about at will and meet the battleships as they come, that we must have.

We must have also the small, fast ships, torpedo boats, and torpedo boat destroyers, to send ahead of our gigantic floating forts of steel.

And, above all, we want absolute coast protection in the shape of submarine boats, of longest range, highest speed and power—a half a dozen of them for every battleship—THAT ANY ENEMY NATION COULD SEND. And we want the flying machines—not toys, but powerful machines of steel and aluminum, regular fighting boats of the air—such as the European nations are building in thousands.

Let the peace gentlemen at Philadelphia work for the right kind of coast fortifications, the world's greatest navy of floating steel battleship forts, a great equipment of submarines and fighting flying machines. Remember that Germany is manufacturing one submarine EVERY WEEK, and Japan easily could do and may now be doing what Germany is doing.

Give the United States the equipment that it needs, the great commercial navy owned by the Government, that would be a training school for fighting sailors and officers—then kindhearted gentlemen can meet in Independence Hall or elsewhere, talk peace to their heart's content, AND KNOW THAT PEACE WILL REMAIN A REALITY.

Let America not decide themselves with the foolish saying, "My country is so great that no body could conquer it."

NOBODY WANTS TO CONQUER IT ALL.

What an enemy would want you can see in this second little picture, taken from Hudson Maxim's admirable book.

The Heart of America.

this is part of a little circle, of one hundred and seventy miles radius, around Peekskill, near New York City. For the purpose of an attacking enemy, it is, as Hudson Maxim says, "The heart of America."

Consider these facts:

1. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 2. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 3. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 4. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 5. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 6. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 7. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 8. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 9. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 10. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense.

You read what the intelligent German diplomat said to a gathering of his compatriots at Shanghai in China. In speaking of careful German organizing, he pointed out the fact that Germany is now in possession of Belgium, exploiting her resources for the benefit of the Germans. Germany is in possession of ten of the richest provinces of France, exploiting their resources for the benefit of Germany. Germany is in possession of a great part of Poland, exploiting that country for the benefit of Germany.

If any of any kind were in possession of the New York City area, around New York City, including New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other important cities, and the great factories where war materials are made, and great coal mines, THAT WOULD BE QUITE ENOUGH OF THE UNITED STATES TO KEEP AN ENEMY HAPPY.

Yet that is only one little part of the United States that must be defended.

We have the great coast of California, we have the Gulf of Mexico, of the Atlantic and of the Pacific.

There is no intelligent kind of peace talk, unless it should be discussed by Americans who really want peace at Philadelphia, or elsewhere, and that is THE IMPORTANCE OF ARMING THIS NATION AGAINST WAR.

1. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 2. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 3. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 4. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 5. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 6. The New York City area is a strategic point of defense. 7. Return of Redingote Is Assured by Paris for the Autumn

Revival of Mode Is Welcome

A REVIVAL OF THE REDINGOTE, the long, loose, flowing coat of the 18th century, is being planned for the autumn season by the designers of Paris. This is a welcome change from the more fitted and structured garments of the past few years. The redingote, in its original form, was a long, loose coat with a high collar and long sleeves. It was often worn over a dress or a skirt. The revival of this garment is seen in the designs of the Paris designers, who are planning to bring back the redingote in a more modern and fashionable form. The new redingotes will have a more fitted and structured design, but they will still have the long, flowing lines of the original garment. First Aid to Those Who Travel

RECENTLY, a woman who had just returned from a long journey, was asked by a friend, "How did you get on?" She replied, "Oh, very well, except for the first aid to those who travel." This is a common experience for many travelers, and it is important to have some first aid knowledge when traveling. The first aid to those who travel is to have a good understanding of the local customs and traditions of the place you are visiting. This will help you to avoid any embarrassing situations and to have a more enjoyable trip. It's an Ill Wind That Doesn't Benefit Playhouses; These Cool Days for Instance.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

The continued cool weather has proved a blow to the theatres which remain open. If it has brought distress to the beach resorts, the Lozenges players at the Majestic have been encouraged to retain Edmund Breece for a second week, and he will be seen as "The Master Mind."

This play did not visit Boston during its career as a road attraction, but was put on last Summer at the Majestic when Breece joined the stock company then performing there. It displays him in what is considered by some to be his best part, that of an idyllic valet, obsequious, humble and efficient, but who is actually the leader of a dashing band of thieves.

Melodrama will also rule at the Castle Square during the coming week. "The Yellow Ticket," Michael Morrie's alleged picture of Russian official character, in which Florence Reed was starred early in the season at the Tremont Theatre, will be shown for the first time at popular prices. It is rather strong meat, with little play.

Keith's bill this week looks lively, and both the Park and the Boston are offering brilliant picture programs. "The Birth of a Nation" continues upon its triumphal career.

They are demolishing Lewis' Orpheum, formerly William Morris' Orpheum, and before that Boston Music Hall, the ancient home of the Boston Symphony, the Handel and Haydn, and all that the city had of music. The old Orpheum was one of the sweetest-sounding theatres in the world. Many bigger ones have since been constructed, but there were none finer. And how perfect were the acoustics of old Music Hall! Mr. Lowry may build a more beautiful theatre than the Orpheum ever was upon its site, but unless his architects are extremely fortunate they will not duplicate its acoustic properties.

In the past of "Common Clay," which is announced by Al Woods for his Broadway run of the piece which created a sensation in Boston during the past season, I see that Miss Colcord has been selected to play the part of the mother of Ellen Neal, which she created at the Castle Square.

By far the most efficient and human thing in "Common Clay" is given to the mother of the wayward girl who she finds herself upon the witness stand and cross-examined as to why her daughter went wrong. Mrs. Neal, as Miss Colcord made her, was a typical old woman of the back streets, narrow, fanatically religious and bowed and crushed under her burden of commonplaceness and poverty. When she read her lines in this role she was acting. It was realism by a woman who was a type of the part she was playing.

And yet Miss Colcord is not at all the Mrs. Neal in real life, either in appearance or manner. It was acting of the sort we rarely see nowadays, and the reason that it was such good acting is because of the wonderful realism that Miss Colcord's acting, and had written her immediately after the performance, expressing her appreciation.

Elizabeth Brice, who played the dissolute youth in "Common Clay," has been chosen for the cast which includes Jane Cow and John Mason. Kivley was a well known actor when he came to the Castle Square.

Miss Colcord, under John Craig.

Ann Mordock, the last actress to be made a star by Charles Frohman, went to see "Common Clay" while she was rehearsing "A Celebrated Trick" in Boston. She told me that she had been carried right out of her seat by Miss Colcord's acting, and had written her immediately after the performance, expressing her appreciation.
